

Working Together

We understand the meaning of ‘shared responsibility’. We’ve all taken part in healing our landscape.

Some of us have been involved for years in local groups, clubs or associations that help promote and restore our local ecosystems or wildlife. Some of us are employed by colleges and universities, conducting ecological research and educating tomorrow’s environmental professionals. Some of us are employed by agencies or companies that manage and protect our ecological systems. While these agencies, educators, students and groups operated more or less in isolation, in 2009, many of these came together to form the Greater Sudbury Biodiversity Partnership.

The Greater Sudbury Biodiversity Partnership will work individually and collectively to help restore, protect, research, monitor and manage our natural systems and wildlife. The Partnership will also promote and educate on the importance of our local biodiversity.

Importantly, the Biodiversity Partnership will provide opportunities for people like YOU to get involved in restoring our ecosystems, creating and managing wildlife habitat and tracking plants and animals in our City.
