28 November 20		<h3>Landfill Organization</h3> The way they run the dump currently is as unorganized as it gets. I spent over an hour in line to drop some garbage as did at least 10 city dump trucks with 2 men in each while I was there? The traffic was backed up to the Kingsway ALL Day and often is when I pass by still, so obvious a continuous problem. 2 Men x 10 trucks = $$$ both in fuel, manpower and production which effects service. Same on the way out backed up almost wrapped around to the entrance. Why weigh cars going in and out when there is never enough weight to charge them. Why do the empty garbage trucks need to be weighed going out? Security parked by the Kingsway because of the traffic? Add a scale for dump trucks only, pass through for cars. and weigh trucks and trailers in and out only. Its actually a simple fix. Savings- 2 manhours per truck per trip to the landfill, 1Hr of fuel from idling . 10 trucks per hour as an example is alot of $$$. Fix the problem and they spend more time picking up garbage then sitting in line at the landfill. Perhaps you wont need as many trucks if you fix the problem I dont know.

Focus on reducing inequality and balanced budgets will follow

All city services are important. I'd rather see Council change how they spend money on services, vs whether they spend money on services. Council should use funds in ways that reduce costs in other categories. For example, by increasing social services funding, can Council reduce spending on emergency services? By investing in a Housing First program, can Council reduce the cost of shelters, emergency services, and social services? Or by investing more in public transit, can Council reduce the cost of road maintenance? Next, taxes and fees paid by those with privilege should be designed to offset the social and economic costs of pervasive income inequality. The economy is healthier when everyone is prospering and spending locally at small- and medium-sized businesses. Maintaining pervasive income inequality is expensive. Make the rich pay their share, so the poor can afford to pay theirs. Any tax savings for the wealthy should free up money for reinvestment in the community -- not for them to hoard for interest or for investment elsewhere. The cap on property tax increases, then, should be an average -- higher for those with more and lower for those with lower incomes. Where taxes are reduced (in actual dollars or in terms of the ratio between contribution and cost), the reduction should be achieved through credits for responsible and sustainable business practices, such as paying workers a living wage, providing benefits, buying supplies from other local businesses, supplying other local businesses and the city at a favourable price, etc. Some services can be paid per use, or annually. A portion of these revenues should be dedicated to reducing income inequality. Likewise, a portion of tax revenues should be dedicated to reducing inequality. If there are increases in fees, users should be informed of what fee-supported privileges cost, financially and socially, and how their fee is being used to offset that cost (e.g., an account of spending supported by increased parking fees might show how the fee offsets not only the cost of operating the parking lot and roads, but also environmental cleanup, and funding public transit for those who do not drive yet pay the price of car culture nonetheless). None of the service types listed above seem to address issues of climate change or truth and reconciliation. I think this is a mistake. We should be treating both of these problems the way we treat debt. Whatever gains or savings we appear to receive by ignoring or under-funding sustainable environmental practices and decolonization, we must add to future budgets as a cost. Our debt to the Anishinaabeg nations whose land Sudbury is built upon is already too great to sustain, and Anishinaabe individuals pay the price of our defaulting every day. The longer we continue to live this way, the more it will cost us to make it right. Finally, the city should go into debt if necessary to keep its residents alive. It's not acceptable to balance the budget at the expense of feeding the hungry, caring for the vulnerable, or housing the homeless. Services that mean life or death for people in Sudbury, regardless of their backgrounds and their ability to pay, ought to be non-negotiable. Driving or having a business are privileges. Housing is a right.

Building a money-losing $100 million dollar arena beside such a money-stealing casino, in order to get that 5 million, is beyond foolish. It is inane, idiotic, bonkers, and reprehensible. The city is worried about raising taxes but want Greater Sudburians to increase their present gambling losses from $50 million a year to $75 million a year. TWENTY FIVE MILLION MORE! Just so the city can snag a measly extra million and a half? That's all that would be added to the city's present haul of about 3.5 to 4 million, compared to existing slots revenue. Cray-Zee!! And on top of it the city wants to build a hundred million dollar arena to help get citizens to go to the casino!?!?! And the Hundred million dollar money-losing arena will cost $150 million with the financing!!!! BONKERS!! Absolutely reee-dic-u-lous!! And to do it all you also need about a thousand citizens to become problem gamblers, risk their mortgages, forgo home repairs, embezzle here and there, to lose about ten to twenty thousand bucks a year, to account for 10-20 million of that $75 million. Please stop trying to build a new arena, go for a renovation of the existing one instead, and cut the budgets for any new library and art gallery in half. That would more than save 14 million. And don't let a casino be any part of the city's budget plans. The few paltry millions they give back is nothing compared to the tens of millions they take.

04 December 20		City Salaries Likely talking to the wall here but in comparing average salaries and benefits to like sized cities like Kingston, Burlington, Barrie and Guelph, salaries in Sudbury are anywhere from 30 to 50% higher than in these other jurisdictions. City managers have been exploited as ineffectual suckers. Freeze salaries for two years and then limit increases for five years at half the increase in the cost of living. Nobody will leave because they will not get a comparable salary elsewhere. Rewrite the HR policies to reflect that salaries will be in line with other jurisdictions. Current salaries can be grandfathered but the policy will apply as vacated positions are filled. Salaries are the biggest component of the budget and unless something is done any pretense at likely savings will die an untimely death.

The mayor and his entourage took a junket to the Cannes Festival in 2019 (I didn't realize he was a movie star) yet nothing has been heard on the return on that investment. How much did that trip cost and what came out of it? Nothing apparently. A pure waste of $thousands. Re Maley Drive I have not seen any figures on traffic counts on our $80 mill investment. How much was traffic reduced on Lasalle? I would think that we are owed some assessment of whether that "investment" was really worth it? We have an Economic Development Department that is spearheading the Junction project-a library and an art gallery without any sense that these are needed. We have a perfectly functioning library on McKenzie and another one in the South end that is about 5K away. Is this a make work project ($60 mill) for the Economic Development department? The same logic applies to the current art gallery. It just needs some promotion. The Economic Development department was given a $million from council. To do what? Is money just being given away willy nilly without knowing what to do with it? The same applies to the 1.5% levy. What is it being used for? This council and city management seem to be operating by the seat of their pants without having any regard as to whom is paying the bills. It would be nice to see a logical and transparent plan for the direction we are heading. I just don't see any indication of that happening and we shouldn't hold our collective breaths. This "Wanting to Hear From You" is a pathetic sham to keep down the restless masses.

Bus Stops are clearly placed along roadways so as to be less of a inconvenience to Motorists than they are placed to be convenient for Bus Riders... moving bus stops to be of top convenience for Bus Riders, giving priority to Bus Riders is needed... in many instances, bus bays could be built. The GOVA Operators need to be communicated to pick up/drop off Passengers at cleared areas.. Since winter maintenance is so costly.. and time consuming, until bus stops are cleared...the nearest cleared driveway ought to be sought by Bus Drivers as "natural" drop off/pick up points. These people need support, especially now because of Covid. It's important that they have access to shelter and can practice proper hygiene, that way they can potentially apply for jobs and improve their situation. We also need to invest in programs for people struggling with addiction and mental health. Covid has been a huge stress on everyone and furthermore that patch of crosses for overdose deaths outside city hall keeps growing.

These are your citizens- it is so incredibly irresponsible and inhumane to stand by and do nothing. A portion of the $63 million policing budget can and should be used to create long term housing for the vulnerable homeless population. Wanna talk about putting our city on the map? How about becoming the largest North American city to dispel homelessness.

I work at a healthfood store and people are not well at all. The top complaints are poor digestion, insomnia, stress and pain. We need insurance to cover for real therapy that not only focuses on dietary change, but includes CBT. Cognitive behavioural therapy has proven effective. Osteopaths and chiropractors do wonders for the body and mind. We shouldn't be paying this on our own.

"cleaning up" the downtown area shouldn't be chasing away those who are homeless, facing poverty, or facing addiction and mental health issues. it should be rejuvenating the city's core by offering those who live there the proper support they need. over a third of sudbury's homeless population identify as Indigenous and as settlers on Atikameksheng-Anishnawbek territory it's audacious that here isn't more support for anyone who is struggling. we don't need a KED. let's make sudbury healthier, not simply wealthier.

The adjustment takes effect in January 2021. The adjustment is based on 100% of the adjustment in the Consumer Price Index (CPI), a weighted basket of goods and services typically purchased by Canadian households each month. City should begin budget process noting the cost of living adjustment as the target increase for each area - that's when people can get creative what can be done with monies provided -- if they are unable to reach the target maybe they aren't trying hard enough

Although not mandatory yet, the use of a mask in the outdoors where droplets easily spread, whether a wind in the air or not, seems to me to be a precautionary measure everyone should be encouraged to take. Sadly, some people have to be shamed into thinking of the health of the greater community. 14 January 21		<h3>Fast Food Advertising</h3> Implement a tax specifically on fast food advertising to offset the negative real and financial impact it has on our health-care system and personal well being. Or add restrictions on certain types of advertising within the city, like none of those fast food coupons you get in the mail. I don't know about you people, but fast food addictions have significantly burdened my own health, and the economic impact of that has fallen on all of us through our publicly funded health care system (thank you very much fellow taxpayers). I try to eat healthier, but sometimes when I get some of those coupons in the mail, I'll fall back to into eating Harvey's everyday for a month. As much as I like to think I have power over modern advertising practices, we're all a slave to our minds and those fast food people have figured out my mind pretty darn well, believe you, me. So yeah, make objectively detrimental advertising more difficult, or at least economically neutral is what I have to say.

While street-level policing practices in street-based drug scenes are often cited as critical to limiting access to the drug supply and reducing violence and disorder they disproportionately target and impact racialized persons. Research has demonstrated how policing models are not effective, but rather contribute to additional harms, including increased violence and that those cases are better handled by organizations that have the skills and expertise to address them – so THEY should be getting increased funding. Not the police.

As an everyday bus taker i would love to see a SAFER DOWNTOWN. Starting with the transit centre. I'm truly tired of seeing security guards all buddy buddy with loitering people, they are there for work and nothing else. The drug paraphernalia in the smoking section that could do lots of harm. Now i used to tell myself to just not have a smoke while waiting for the bus, well that isn't the big picture. I pay for a service and i should be able to smoke a cigarette in some sort of peace. It's very often someone is lying on a bench or the ground too high or about to lose their life. Putting up fences hasn't helped so we need to find a better solution. If that means a security guard needs to be at the smoking section at all times, switching shifts than that's how it should be. We have the right to feel safe!

There needs to be a change in investment to programs that actually work rather than the current state of things. Reallocation of funding towards affordable and safe housing, mentorship and vocational training will ultimately also cost the city and its constituents less in the long term. A healthy and happy population would help make Downtown Sudbury a vibrant place to be, and stimulate the Sudbury economy. When funding is instead spent on tools that have been not used because it's "not charged" or "forgotten to be turned on", and subsequently the footage from those tools are seen as not integral to an investigation, we really wonder if the end goal is to actually improve things, or to line the pockets of managers. Currently, the funding to be allocated to critical social services is being used to increase an already bloated police budget. We can instead work to make a more efficient and streamlined police force by using lessons from Europe. Police don't come to a scene in large expensive individual cars or SUVs, instead they respond to most events with backup already in the car, and a reasonably priced car at that. Obviously as with anything, it isn't perfect, but it is a step to a safer, and healthier community.

And from this, it shows the GSPS that the police require a budget increase (over 90% are police salaries). How do the police respond to these mental-health calls? Don't we have underfunded institutions that provide specialized solutions to the climbing issue of mental health, as opposed to "jack-of-all-trades" police officers? The police officers should focus on what they're good at (inciting violence and anxiety?) and a specialized work force should be better adopted into society and funded to properly solve this. Unless this budget is being allocated to wards a specific mental health unit and not generally trained police officers, defund the police!!

Police are incapable of achieving this. Offsetting income inequality, inv esting in housing first services, approving and funding a safe consumption site, and a dequately funding accessible youth programming are all shown to reduce crime and make cities healthier and safer. Further, body worn cameras have proven to be far to o costly for their benefit and are a distraction from the real reform and decolonization t hat are necessary for a truly equitable society.

I question the need for a budget increase amidst increased outrage towards cases of police-based violence, discrimination, and harm, especially towards black, indigenous, and people of colour around Canada and Ontario who are disproportionately targeted by policing practices. I believe that funds can be directed towards services that are better equipped to handle instances such as mental-health calls. There has also been research on the ineffectiveness of body cameras: in some cases body cams cannot be turned on, many officers have been let off the hook or face very light penalties for not having their cams turned on, or body cam footage has not been released when requested. Redirect funds to social development services such as long-term housing for homeless communities, food security programs, public health services, community-led anti-violence programs and training, and to services supporting victims of sexual assault and gender-based violence.
